

OP010

Grant writing

Author & Presenter: Eme T. Owoaje

Department of Community Medicine, College of Medicine, University of Ibadan,
Oyo, Nigeria

Cite: Journal of Global Medicine 2023, 3: S1 - <http://dx.doi.org/10.51496/jogm.v3.S1.I35>

Grant writing is the process of responding to an application for a financial grant from institutions such as research organisations, government agencies, corporations, foundations, trusts, and international funding organisations. The skills required to write successful grants are referred to as grantsmanship. Over the past few decades, the process of applying for grants has become increasingly complex and highly competitive. Therefore, the grant proposals must be based on innovative ideas, capable of advancing the current status of knowledge, compelling, and well-written.